Monthly review

Despite a rebound during the month, markets ended August down 3.9% in Europe (Euro Stoxx 50), 1.8% in the United States (S&P500) and 6.4% in emerging countries (MSCI EM).

Economic data pointed to a slowdown in activity in the United States, but especially in Europe and China. The downgrade of the US credit rating by Fitch (from AAA to AA+) worried investors at a time when the risk of a "hard landing" is reappearing.

Portfolio companies posted good second-quarter results. The weighted average sales growth of companies in the portfolio was 4.1%, compared with a 1% decline for the benchmark index.

Among the main contributors to performance were Danaher (+3.9%), Alphabet (+2.6%), Booking (+4.5%) and Amazon (+3.2%).

Danaher has announced the acquisition of UK-based company Abcam for $5.7 billion. Abcam is a producer and distributor of proteins, antibodies and reagents for the life sciences industry. It is a key player in this value chain, and we are reassured to see that Danaher continues to make strategic acquisitions. Danaher's management intends to significantly improve margins by integrating Abcam into the Danaher Business System. Danaher is an outstanding company integrator, and the consolidation of its market is central to our investment thesis.

The main detractors to performance are LVMH (-7.8%), ASML (-6.6%) and Walt Disney (-5.9%).

Concerns about the global economic slowdown, with persistent inflationary pressures, are beginning to weigh on discretionary consumption in Europe and the USA, while growth in the Chinese economy is stalling. In this context, LVMH's share price fell after a good start to the year.

Disney published disappointing results: sales were up 4%, but operating income was unchanged, and net income showed a loss of $460 million for the quarter. The company's ongoing restructuring program resulted in significant book write-downs, including $2.44 billion due to the removal of content from its streaming platforms. Since his return to the company, Bob Iger has implemented drastic cost-cutting measures, reduced headcount, and cancelled content releases. He also wants to restore the "magic" of Disney by refocusing on content quality. The other source of disappointment in the results is the 7.4% drop in subscribers to its streaming services. The loss of the rights to the Indian Cricket Premier League, one of the world's most watched sporting events, is the main cause. Disney's share price is currently at its lowest since 2014, with the stock trading at 17 times next year's earnings.
